Once again, and for the third consecutive year, we must mention the effect of the crisis as we take stock of the year. These are difficult times that will make a profound mark on our history, without a doubt.

Fortunately for 6.5 million people, Action Against Hunger has managed to stay afloat in this storm. The variety of donors, our teams’ abilities to adapt to a new financial context and our members and friends’ perseverance have meant that the volume of the organisation’s operations has remained at around €45 million. And that is not an easy task in times like these. Other humanitarian organisations have had to make painful decisions this year and not all of them have been able to continue with their work. It is not easy to carry on in spite of the crisis.

However, we still believe that, sometimes, promising opportunities emerge from major crises. For example, that food prices are going up should one day have benefits for those who produce it. Nevertheless, it must be said that, until now, that has not been the case; in fact, the rise in food prices has opened up a new front in the fight against hunger.

In 2010, Action Against Hunger has concentrated on expanding the coverage of our nutrition programmes. Now that the diagnosis and treatment of malnutrition have been consolidated, the challenge is to apply them to more children and widen their scope on a massive scale. Until now, only between 3% and 9% of malnourished children under five have access to the simple treatment that can save their lives. Next year, we aim to put all our efforts into increasing that percentage. Because it is simply unacceptable that more than 10,000 children die of hunger each day.

IN MEMORIAM

On June 7th of 2011 Jorge Semprún, the first chairman of Action Against Hunger-Spain (1995-2000) who went on to become Honorary Chairman of the organisation, passed away. Semprún was, basically, an indignant man. A man who wanted to “change the world a little” with his literary work after experiencing the horrors of Buchenwald. He also wanted to change the situation of hunger in the world by supporting our first steps in Spain.

Jorge Semprún dedicated a lot of his time to our organisation in its first years. He insisted on travelling and finding out first hand about the reality of the projects. He chose the projects in what were then the most complex areas, such as Angola, at a time when the country was divided due to one of Africa’s worst wars. Semprún was taken aback by the widespread nature of the disaster and the suffering of the most vulnerable groups. It made him angry because Angola’s countless riches (diamonds, oil and fish) failed to make a contribution to fighting poverty. On the contrary, they just fed the war. This paradox, which, since then, has been confirmed as a terrible law of African life, left a deep impression on him. He was, on the other hand, encouraged by the health centres in which Action Against Hunger attended to the victims of mines, cholera and hunger.

“We are a guerrilla organisation, humanitarian guerrillas,” he told us, with admiration, on his return. We, the guerrilla warriors, will continue with our work to try and create a world without hunger. A challenge in which we will always be accompanied by Jorge Semprún.

In 2010 we helped 1,376,147* people. This has been made possible through the help of 201 projects, 192 development workers, 104 institutions, 94,719 members of the public, 773 local staff, 230 companies, and 1,789 beneficiaries in health.

- 220,184 beneficiaries in water & sanitation. Bringing sanitation infrastructure to the suburbs is one of the greatest challenges for global urban expansion.
- 363,027 beneficiaries in nutrition. Community-based treatment of malnutrition allows us to bring about a massive increase in the number of children in our programmes.
- 1,789 beneficiaries in health. We work with Health Ministries so that they may incorporate nutritional protocols into their public health programmes.
- 47,064 beneficiaries in disaster risk reduction. Being prepared for possible natural disasters can considerably reduce damage in emergencies.
- 654,495 beneficiaries in food security. Conservation agriculture will be key to feeding a growing population.

EVALUATING 2010

After having reached the 1 billion-person mark, hunger numbers dropped in 2010 for the first time in 15 years. We must be pleased about this information, but also very cautious: 25 million hungry people continue to suffer. There is no rational explanation to justify that one sixth of humanity lives on an empty stomach. The three most recent harvests are the biggest in history. According to FAO, this year, the planet has produced 50% more than the necessary calories to feed its population.

EMERGENCIES (VISIBLE AND SILENT)
The year began with the alarming images of a country in ruins. TV channels all over the world showed live broadcasts of the suffering caused by one of the most damaging earthquakes in years. Everyone bent over backwards to help Haiti, to a greater or lesser extent. The intervention was and continues to be complex. A country that was already one of the world’s most unstable and unstructured cannot be rebuilt just with funds. Even though the challenges remain huge, Action Against Hunger-Spain was able to relieve the suffering of 275,000 Haitians. Our in-depth knowledge of the country (we have been there since 1985) provided us with a privileged position from which to do this. The other side of the coin is represented by the other invisible crises, especially in Africa, which have been eclipsed, to some extent, by large-scale emergencies in Haiti and Pakistan.

THE SECURITY OF OUR INTERVENTIONS
In the past year, we have had to evacuate our teams from conflictive areas several times, temporarily suspending the support given to the most vulnerable groups. The situations in the Sahel (where mafias and terrorist groups have joined forces to make development workers one of their targets), Colombia (where the rearming of demobilised paramilitaries has further worsened security conditions in cities) and Latin America in general (where crime, drug trafficking and organised crime make the space available to humanitarian aid increasingly smaller) are especially worrying. Meanwhile, the growing trend for western powers to handle conflicts in a “humanitarian and social” way (see Iraq and Afghanistan), during which the civil context dwarfs the military context, is of little help and one of the ultimate outcomes is confusion between humanitarian and military contexts. At Action Against Hunger, we are prepared to coordinate humanitarian interventions with Army interventions, but we still believe that it is important to differentiate between the two mandates, precisely in order to avoid further reducing the already depleted humanitarian space.

CRISIS (SPANISH AND GLOBAL)
The word ‘crisis’ will leave its permanent mark on 2010. Without entering into financial issues, unemployment and family debt levels in Spanish households are witness to the scope of the situation. Solidarity has not been the first issue struck off the lists of Spanish families’ priorities, but companies and regional cooperation departments have made drastic cuts in their development aid budgets in 2010. The budget for 2011 does not auger any better for Official Development Aid. The crisis is forcing those of us who do have to give less. But what other things are those who fight to find food each day forced to deal with? The options for the most vulnerable groups in the face of the unstoppable rise in food prices are often desperate: unsustainable debt, sale of assets and the reduction in the amount or quality of daily food rations. In the most extreme situations, a true fight for life is established, with males gaining priority over females, the strong over the old, weak or ill. There is no doubt that the crisis has intensified the inhumanity of hunger.

And all this is happening as we become increasingly certain that, right now, the world is capable of feeding everyone; that we finally have the knowledge and resources to treat malnutrition; that we are the first generation that can bring an end to hunger. Our work in 2011 will be based on these convictions.
RESTAURANTS AGAINST HUNGER: Food, drink and solidarity go hand in hand

The ‘Restaurants against Hunger’ campaign brought together more than 300 restaurants from all over Spain for the same cause between October 7th and November 7th. The initiative was made possible thanks to the Spanish Federation of Hotels and Catering (FEHR) and 27 catering associations. We also had the collaboration of Hoteles Accor, Fundación Seur, Hoteles Fontecruz and Turespaña. For a whole month, customers could select special menus or dishes and the establishments donated a percentage of their price to Action Against Hunger-Spain’s nutrition projects. Outcome: €45,000 to fight against child malnutrition.

FEHR is made up of 75 provincial, regional and national associations. Its mission is to promote the economic and social development of the catering and hotel industry to benefit society in general and the industry in particular.

Our office in the United Kingdom has been carrying out this initiative since 1998.

Nine companies scored a goal against malnutrition on 29 October 2010 in our 3rd INTER-COMPANY TOURNAMENT AGAINST HUNGER. Outcome: an additional €20,000 for our fight against malnutrition.

In April ARMENIO was released, a documentary based on an idea devised by Emilio Aragon. Armenio tells the story of the visit of violinist Ara Malikian’s visit, thanks to Action Against Hunger-Spain, to the land of his ancestors. A story led by music, directed by José Carrasco, produced by Globomedia and funded by the Valencian regional government.
